House Bill for National Bank Loans on Farms.

KEEPING SAVINGS AT HOME

Eastern Men Deplore the Measure as Likely to Break Down National Bank System-West Doesn't Want Its Money Going to Wall Street, Danger of Power Being Abused.

Yesterday's session of Congress was essentially a business one. A big batch of bills were introduced in both Houses. The annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury was received, as well as a large number of reports of lesser importance "But I must know the reason," said the from other departments. He said that the danger of the power being abused is so slight as to be altogether outweighed by

The House touched on currency reform yesterday when it passed the bill, by a rising vote of III to 51, authorizing national banks to make loans on farm lands. It provoked decided opposition from the friends of State banks and of Eastern financial interests.

The bill provides that a national bank may lend for a period of one year 25 per cent of its capital on farm land, to the extent of 50 per cent of a conservative market value of the land. By an amend-"He must hold his tongue here," said ment, tacked on to the bill, such loans

Luckily hope, his name will be cleared."

"And then you will throw me over and shown his hand too clearly." It would have been better." he considered, losing her temper and coloring hotly.

"How dare you speak to me like, this, Julius! I will no longer be bound to you. I never loved you, but I have always tried to see the best side of you. But I have always tried to see the best money from Wall street and keep it in circulation at home. Messrs. Hill, of Con-necticut, and De Armond, of Missouri, vigorously opposed it-the former becauhe deemed it the entering wedge in the destruction of the national banking system, and a panic-breeder for the whole Country, the later, that it would operate to drive State banks out of existence.
